8. Pupillage application questionnaire

The five compulsory candidate questions have been replaced with two optional questions, which are intended to produce more useful answers, and speed up marking time for chambers. Chambers may accept the two suggested questions and add up to five questions of their own, or overwrite the two suggested questions and add up to seven questions of their own, with a 100 to 1000 word limit. Chambers may also choose to stick to the traditional five questions. As always, the onus is on candidates to check the ‘Pupillage application questionnaire’ section of all vacancies of interest. This shouldn’t catch any applicants ‘off-guard’ as, in previous years, chambers have been able to add up to two questions of their own and candidates have always been expected to submit tailored applications.
